

13.1 trēs servī

Referring to trēs servī, page 5 in your textbook, complete the following table by naming the person who made each statement and then by translating the statement.

Statement	Who said it?	Translation
1 aqua est foeda!
2 iterum pluit! semper pluit!
3 ego labōrāre nōlō!
4 dominus noster irātus advenit!
5 nōs dē hāc coniūrātiōne audīre volumus.
6 ego ad Ītaliā redīre volō.
7 ego aquam bibere nōn possum!
8 fessus sum.
9 ego sōlem vidēre volō.
10 ego dormīre volō.

13.2 Slave Chains

This chain, found in Britain, was used to shackle slaves by the neck. Large numbers of Britons were enslaved at the time of the Roman conquest and after the revolt of Boudica (page 64 in your textbook). The slaves that worked in the mines and on farm estates were often very badly treated and sometimes were kept in chains. Before the Romans came, the Britons, too, kept and exported slaves. They used the same type of slave chains.

Write a poem or a short monologue expressing the plaint of a slave chain and the depressing and degrading life it leads.